South Carolina Department of Agriculture launches new web site - agriculture.sc.gov

The South Carolina Department of Agriculture and Hugh Weathers, Commissioner, are pleased to announce that the Department's web site has moved to agriculture.sc.gov.

If you drive a car, own a pet, plant a garden, or eat even one meal a day, then you depend on your South Carolina Department of Agriculture's programs and services. The Department hopes that consumers and farmers will find the new site not only more graphically attractive and user-friendly but that they will find information relative to all their needs - from checking the accuracy of fuel dispensers to analyzing the purity of seeds. Where else can farmers check the market news, the local weather, and join the Certified SC Grown program all with a click of a mouse? Consumers can also point and click to information on food recalls, the location of nearby Certified Roadside Markets, recipes, and gardening tips through quick links to Clemson's Home and Garden Center and Gardening 123.

Everyone can still subscribe to and advertise in the Market Bulletin by mail, email, or fax, but now they can also subscribe and advertise through an online process. It's as easy as 1-2-3. Just follow directions at the Market Bulletin section on the site or call our Market Bulletin staff at 803-734-2536 and they'll assist in the process. So with all this available in one place, bookmark the new site for future reference.

For more information about the South Carolina Department of Agriculture, visit agriculture.sc.gov or call 803-734-2210.

Commissioner

South Carolina's open for business

Cookies and barbeque sauces don't sound like they'd be a good combination. Any dairy farmer will tell you that some milk is needed with cookies. But, but for some of our small business owners in South Carolina, cookies and 'que were a great fit last month in Chicago.

In April, six South Carolina companies were represented at the Global Food & Style Expo held in Chicago. This event ran from April 27-29 at Chicago's McCormick Place and is America's largest display of specialty and organic products with exhibitors, buyers, and delegates representing more than 100 countries. It was a great thing for our South Carolina companies to put their product in front of more than 12,000 attendees, especially domestic and international buyers.

David White went to the Expo with his Black Mustard Barbeque Slather. He hoped to show other parts of the country that South Carolina barbeque is best. David, and his wife Carolyn, had a steady stream of tasters trying this unique condiment at the show. Marketed as a barbeque sauce, the slather found its way to other booths around the Expo. A specialty meat processing company from Wisconsin and a sausage company from Chicago were using the slather on their products.

Goat and Sheep Parasite Control Seminar

Clemson Extension is offering a goat and sheep parasite control seminar on May 24, 2008 from 9:30 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. at the Laurens County Clemson Extension Office (214 W. Laurens Street, Laurens, SC). The seminar will focus on the FAMACHA Parasite Monitoring System.

The FAMACHA System was developed in response to parasites developing resistance to parasite control medication. The most economically important internal parasite in goats and sheep is a blood feeder, Haemonchus contortus (barber pole worm). Animals infected with barber pole worms will develop anemia. The FAMACHA system scores the amount of redness in the eyelids as a method to determine the degree of anemia. This is used to identify the animals that will benefit from treatment. Mr. Bob Storey with the University of Georgia College of Veterinary Medicine will be the featured speaker for the seminar.

Participants will learn why parasites develop resistance, how to use the FAMACHA system to score live animals, and using the scores to make parasite treatment decisions. In addition to parasite control there will be sessions on proper forage selection and utilization for goats and sheep.

Registration is required for the seminar. Cost is $45 per person. Lunch and handouts are included in the registration fee. Directions to the Laurens County Clemson Extension Office are available on the web at www.clemson.edu/laurens. For questions about the seminar and to receive registration forms, contact Dr. John Irwin at 864-984-2514, ext 117 or jwirwin@clemson.edu or your local Clemson extension office.

Chicken Divine

|--|--------------------------------|
| 6 chicken breasts or 1 large whole chicken | dash of Worcestershire sauce |
| 2 pkg. broccoli flowerets, fresh or frozen | dash of Tabasco sauce |
| 2 cans cream of chicken soup | 1 - 2 tsp. curry powder |
| 1 small jar pimento strips | 2 tbsp. fresh or dried parsley |
| 1/4 c. lemon juice, fresh | 1 c. grated cheese |
| 1 carton sour cream | bread crumbs |
| 1/2 c. mayonnaise | paprika |

Cover chicken with water. Add bay leaf, celery tops, salt, and pepper. Cook. Debone chicken. Blanch broccoli and let cool on paper towels. Place chicken in buttered casserole. Add layer of broccoli and pimento strips. Mix soup, sour cream, mayonnaise, curry, Worcestershire sauce, Tabasco sauce, and parsley. Pour over chicken and broccoli. Repeat layers. Top with cheese and bread crumbs and paprika. Bake at 375 degrees for 35 to 40 minutes.

Steve Roman, who owns White Tail Country Meats in Hayward, Wisconsin, said he loved the slather paired with the meats he sells. In fact, a lot of other people at the Expo did too. I hear Black Mustard on top of elk and bison bacon is pretty tasty.

Jerry Elam owns the Hilton Head Cookie Company. His investment in the trip proved worthwhile also, as he came away with about 100 leads for his expanding company.

The purpose of trade shows, like the Expo in Chicago, is to introduce South Carolina products into new places. It works too. Steve is planning on selling Black Mustard at his retail outlet in Wisconsin. And that is just one of the many avenues opened up through an Expo. The exposure gained from this show is important because South Carolina's agricultural economy depends on both domestic and foreign trade. For years, about one-third of US production would find its way into the export market. South Carolina statistics are probably similar.

One of our reasons for launching Certified South Carolina program last May was to increase profit opportunities for our farmers through more aggressive marketing. This initiative is working and opening new routes for South Carolina's agriculture.

Our Marketing staff does a great job of helping businesses reach into new markets. One of the ways we do that is through our membership in the Southern United States Trade Alliance (SUSTA), a non-profit agricultural export trade development association comprised of the Departments of Agriculture of the 15 southern states and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico. Since 1973, SUSTA's programs and services have assisted exporters of high-value food and agricultural products.

Many small businesses make up the backbone of the local economy here in South Carolina. According to the Small Business Chamber of Commerce 96 percent of the businesses in this state have less than 100 employees. Small business is local, just like agriculture is local. So every time you make a purchase of in season local fruits or vegetables that money stays in South Carolina and helps grow our state's economy. And what could be better than that?

Clemson Sustainable Agriculture Program 2008 Organic Vegetable Production Workshop Series “Organic Vegetable Farming on a Budget” Part One: Spring and Early Summer Vegetable Production Techniques

When: Tuesday, May 27, 2008 - 10:00 a.m. until 4:00 p.m. (Lunch provided)

Where: Sumter Cooperative Farms, 320 West Brewington Rd., Sumter, SC 29153

Instructors: Azeez Mustafa and Gayla Carle of Sumter Cooperative Farms. SCF is an organic farming cooperative known for the high quality and diversity of their vegetables. If you are interested in getting started with organic vegetables or in improving your production techniques, this will be an excellent opportunity to learn from experts.

Audience: Farmers, market gardeners, home gardeners, extension agents and others interested in organic vegetable production.

Sponsored by: Clemson University Sustainable Agriculture Program and the Southern SARE Program.

Topics covered: The focus of this first workshop will be on low-budget methods for spring organic vegetable production. Topics will include:

- Construction of simple cold frames
- Variety selection
- Planting Techniques
- Ground/Soil Preparation
- Planting in the field
- Organic soil amendments and fertility
- Mulching for Weed and Moisture Control

Participants will learn key principles in a classroom setting in the morning and then move to the field for demonstrations, discussion and Q&A with Azeez and Gayla.

Registration: $15.00 includes workshop and lunch. Send check (due by Wednesday, May 21st) payable to Clemson University along with registration form to Kelly Gilkerson, Department of Entomology, Soils and Plant Science, B30 Long Hall, Clemson University, Clemson, SC 29634-0315. Space is limited. Registration is based on a first-come, first-served basis.

Additional information: Contact Kelly Gilkerson, kgilker@clemson.edu.

*Clemson Extension personnel who attend are eligible for a travel scholarship. Please contact Geoff Zehnder for more information: zehnder@clemson.edu.
